Learning objectives: The student gains theoretical knowledge and practical skills in the field of translation studies. They have theoretical and methodological knowledge in the areas of translation and interpreting theory and methods, machine translation, and the history of translation and interpreting. They can perform translation analysis and edit a text in practice. The student can apply their knowledge and skills to process samples of different text types. They can apply their knowledge of interpreting theory and methodology in practice during interpreting.
Brief outline of the course: The student knows the basic concepts in translation (studies) and how thinking about translation as a process/product developed over time. They develop linguistic competences and learn how to identify the attributes and functions of different text types, and train to correctly use sources in the process. They train fluent and correct oral expression and cultivate their language. By training translation, editing, and computer-processing of different text types, the student improves their own linguistic abilities. Students learn the difference between translation and interpreting as separate types of mediated communication process, brief history of interpreting as a separate scholarly discipline, major European interpreting schools, basics of the interpreting communication theory, interpreting typology, strategies, competences and their development, and the current state of interpreting in Slovakia (what awaits us in practice). Attention is also paid to developing cognitive and communication skills, memory training, concentration, attention splitting, training selected interpreting strategies, and note-taking.

Test: 0–30 p. b) final assessment: Oral exam – a multimedia presentation addressing the selected topic: 0–40 p.
Learning objectives: The course aims to help the student develop their language skills necessary for specialised and scientific communication in Slovak, and in academic communication. The student is familiar with the strategies and techniques of efficient reading and specialised text comprehension. They know the attributes of the Slovak specialised discourse. They know and use the Slovak linguistic structures necessary to express complex mental processes. They can verbalise mental operations such as classification, comparison, definition, analysis, and synthesis. They can find and efficiently use relevant sources of specialised information in the Slovak language. They can select information and arrange them into a hierarchy allowing for their memorisation and reproduction. The student can work with the Slovak specialised discourse orally and in writing. They can discuss specialised topic in Slovak. They can prepare a quality multimedia presentation addressing a specialised topic.
Brief outline of the course:

Development of receptive skills: listening comprehension of lectures in Slovak, efficient note-taking based on listening, efficient reading and specialised text comprehension (popular-scientific article, specialised article) – strategic training.

Developing productive skills: oral communication: specialised conversation about the selected topics (specialised discussion, polemic), specialised lecture with a multimedia presentation, specialised writing: specialised paper, review, opinion, e-mail communication (specialised and academic).

Expanding of vocabulary: general/specialised lexis, basic terms from the selected fields, word formation in terminology, internationalisation of specialised communication (international prefixes and lexis, loanwords). Collocations and structures occurring in different kinds of specialised texts – the specificities of the universal specialised discourse. Verbo-nominal analytisms. Abstract lexis and its creation in Slovak.

Training the creation of grammatical structures typical for specialised and scholarly texts (active and passive participles, descriptive and reflective passive, transgressive, gerunds, deverbatives derived from perfective/imperfective verbs, impersonal formulations).

Course Description

University: Matej Bel University in Banská Bystrica
Faculty: Faculty of Arts
Code: 1d-rus-210	Course name: Stylistics
Type, extent and method of instruction: Form of instruction: Lecture / Seminar Course type: A (A - Compulsory courses, B - Compulsory elective courses, C - Elective courses) Recommended number of periods: 13 / 26 Method of study: combined
Number of credits: 5
Recommended semester/trimester: 5.
Level: I.
Prerequisites:
Course completion conditions: During the semester, the student completes and submits homework, a seminar paper, and takes a written test. After completing the semester, the student takes the final oral and written exams. The maximum number of points consisting of continuous and final assessment is 100. The student has the right to one resit. Credits are assigned to the student who acquires a minimum of 65 points out of a possible 100 for completing the given requirements. The grading scale: A (100–94%), B (93–87%), C (86–80%), D (79–73%), E (72–65%). a) continuous assessment: Completing homework: 0–15 p. Seminar paper preparation: 0–15 p. Test: 0–25 p. b) final assessment: Oral and written final exams: 0–50 p. (written part: 0–25 p.; oral part: 0–25 p.)
Learning objectives: The student has systematic knowledge of Russian vs. Slovak stylistics. This is core knowledge and a necessity in any foreign language study. The student understands the stylistic layers of the language in the cultural, social, and national contexts. They understand the social position and function of the Russian language in the broader social, cultural, and pragmatic contexts and how these compare to the Slovak realities. They can apply the knowledge in this area (Russian vs. Slovak) to analyse and create texts. They develop communication-pragmatic competences and skills related to public speaking in Russian and cultivate their interpretation skills useful in a variety of communication situations. They understand how this discipline generalises the linguistic knowledge. They have systemic and communication knowledge of the language culture and its use. The student can identify the stylistic aspects of a text and justify their opinion by providing phonetic, grammatical, and lexical examples. They critically perceive texts written in different functional styles. They know the basic terminology pertaining to scientific, administrative, journalistic, confessional, literary, and vernacular styles in Russian. They can compare different texts and analyse linguistic as well as stylistic errors resulting from the Slovak-Russian interference in bilingual speakers. Their linguistic background allows them to become a professional language user able to pick the correct style for every communication situation. They can identify and correct stylistic errors.

Brief outline of the course:

Stylistics as a scholarly field and an academic subject. Contrastive stylistics – Russian vs. Slovak.
Stylistic problems and language culture – the Slovak-Russian interference.

Russian euphony as a stylistic phenomena

Functional styles in Russian.

Language means typical for different functional styles – phonetics, morphology, syntax, lexicology, semantics:

- scientific style
- administrative style
- journalistic style
- confessional style
- literary style
- vernacular style.

Functional and stylistic text analysis.

Stylistic errors and their correction.
