Faculty: Faculty of Law
Code: 1e-PMZs	Course name: International Treaty Law
Type, extent and method of instruction: Form of instruction: Lecture Course type: B (A - Compulsory courses, B - Compulsory elective courses, C - Elective courses) Recommended number of periods: 9s Method of study: combined
Number of credits: 3
Recommended semester/trimester: 6.
Level: I.
Prerequisites: KMEPaPK PrF/1e-MPV1s/23
Course completion conditions: The prerequisite for passing the course is successful completion of the final examination (100%). The evaluation is in accordance with the classification scale according to the Study Regulations of the MBU. a) continuous assessment: Continuous evaluation is not performed. b) final assessment: Final assessment in the form of a written paper (test, open questions).
Learning objectives: By completing the course, the student will gain knowledge regarding the process of international treaty-making. The student will understand the various legal texts in the field of international treaty-making as well as the legal life of treaties. The student will gain knowledge of the case law of international judicial bodies with particular emphasis on the case law of the International Court of Justice. The acquired knowledge will also be of benefit to members of other legal professions, as international treaty law is one of the most frequent areas of law with a firm place in national legal systems, as courts often apply international treaties directly in their decisions. The student will acquire practical skills which he or she will use in his or her professional activities, particularly in the context of diplomacy and the civil service, for example in drafting bilateral treaties or in participating in negotiation talks aimed at the preparation and adoption of an international treaty. The analytical thinking and knowledge gained from specific cases before international bodies will help the student to apply this knowledge in practical situations encountered in the negotiation of international treaties. Upon graduation, the student will understand the process of international treaty-making and its legal life. In addition to the acquisition of theoretical and practical knowledge, the student will acquire important interpersonal skills relating to concrete behaviour, communication and cooperation in the process of negotiating international treaties, as these are important aspects of the success of the negotiation of these treaties. On the basis of the skills acquired, the graduate will be able to further develop these skills in practice.
Brief outline of the course: 1. Introduction to the law of treaties 2. Codification of the law of treaties, including its history 3. The Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties: scope of the Convention

4. Conclusion of international treaties 5. Reservations to international treaties 6. Entry into force and provisional application of international treaties 7. Compliance with and implementation of international treaties 8. Interpretation of international treaties 9. Amendment and modification of treaties 10. Invalidity, termination and suspension of the operation of a treaty 11. International treaties concluded by international organisations 12. Treaties concluded by the European Union 13. Relationship between international and national law and Slovak treaty practice

Course completion conditions: The prerequisite for passing the course is successful completion of the final examination (100%). The evaluation is in accordance with the classification scale according to the Study Regulations of the MBU. a) continuous assessment: Continuous evaluation is not performed. b) final assessment: Záverečné hodnotenie formou písomnej práce (test, otvorené otázky).
Learning objectives: After completing the international legal protection of human rights students have knowledge of international legal instruments and institutions intended to protect human rights and fundamental freedoms. They know the theoretical and practical problems associated with defining and enforcing rules governing human rights and fundamental freedoms and are able to translate them into practice.
Brief outline of the course: The issue of the international legal protection of human rights is, among other things, reinforced by the fact that there is now a consensus within the international community on the question of the priority of the sources of international law over the domestic regulation of these relations. The protection of human rights is systematically ensured within the international community by the constitution of a number of international institutions with decision-making powers in these matters. The curriculum focuses primarily on the following topics: The concept, content and interpretation of human rights. Protection of human rights - historical development. The Charter of the United Nations. Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The International Covenant on Civil and Human Rights. International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. Human Rights Committee. International Labour Organisation. Conventions against slavery and forced labour. Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. Prohibition of torture. Conventions against discrimination. Protection of the rights of women and children. Protection of the rights of refugees and the homeless. International law protection of minorities. European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and Additional Protocols. European Court of Human Rights. European Social Charter. Protection of minorities within the Council of Europe. Protection of human rights within the European Union. OSCE and human rights. The American system for the protection of human rights. The African system for the protection of human rights. The Arab system for the protection of human rights.

Number of credits: 10
Recommended semester/trimester:
Level: I.
Prerequisites:
Course completion conditions: In the evaluation of the bachelor thesis processing, the level of processing of the bachelor thesis is evaluated in terms of its formal aspect, the topicality of its topic, including the rationale for the choice of the topic with regard to the social significance of the issue under study. The selection of a sufficient number of relevant literary sources of book and journal character, their arrangement into a coherent whole and the own critical discussion of the presented theoretical concepts are evaluated, since the author of the bachelor thesis has to demonstrate the required level of processing of the theoretical part of the thesis. An important role in the evaluation of the bachelor thesis is played by the evaluation of the practical application of the chosen theoretical concepts, which are the content of a separate part of the bachelor thesis or are contained in its conclusions. The supervisor as well as the opponent of the bachelor thesis will evaluate the contribution and usefulness of the bachelor thesis in his/her statement, possibly indicating recommendations for the author of the thesis. In his/her opinion, both the supervisor and the thesis opponent have the possibility to indicate questions for the author, which the author must be able to answer at the defence of the bachelor thesis at the required level in order to successfully defend the bachelor thesis. More detailed criteria for assessing the level of thesis processing are contained in the Internal Quality System of MBU.
Learning objectives: The difficulty of the final thesis corresponds to the bachelor's degree of study, and thus also to the expected extent of the acquired theoretical knowledge, mastering the methodological instrumentarium of the scientific field and, last but not least, the skills of their use in solving specific scientific and practical problems. The bachelor thesis has a theoretical-applied character. In the bachelor's thesis the student demonstrates the ability to work competently with the conceptual apparatus of the field of study, the ability to creatively use a wide range of literary and other information sources, to analyze, classify and systematize diverse facts, to justify the presented ideas by argumentation, as well as to formulate practical conclusions and recommendations in a refined manner.
