a) continuous assessment:
A portfolio of the student's artworks with reflection from a pedagogical perspective; ongoing completion of seminar activities and tasks in LMS Moodle.

Learning objectives:
There are two possible study plans for meeting the course requirements:
Basic plan – consisting of theoretical preparation (resources in LMS Moodle) and practical training (in the PF UMB ceramics studio).
The student:
1. demonstrates knowledge of safety principles when working in a workshop, 2. understands the origin of modeling clay, can describe its properties, and select suitable material, 3. understands the principle of recycling and can prepare clay for modeling, 4. can prepare the working environment, take care of tools, and maintain clay, 5. practices basic techniques of working with clay (e.g., slab building, ...), 6. recognizes selected surface treatments of ceramics, 7. presents a chosen type of ceramics from art history, 8. documents and reflects on their creative processes and arrives at their own solution to a given task.
Extended plan – implemented through service-learning participation in leading a ceramics and natural materials creative club for children (ages 6–13). In addition to the basic outcomes (1–8), the student: 9. is able to guide children in working with clay, collaborate, and reflect on the creative process from a pedagogical perspective,10. evaluates the suitability and feasibility of an art activity for a selected child's age, including preparation demands on the teacher and the creative potential of the activity, 11. develops a portfolio of art activities applicable in extracurricular education for children.

Recommended semester/trimester: 3., 5.

Level: I.

Prerequisites:

Course completion conditions:
To successfully complete the course, students must attend lectures regularly, miss no more than four seminars, and successfully complete two graded assignments: an oral and a written one. Students who receive a grade lower than 65% on any of the graded assignments will not pass the course. If the final grade is lower than 65%, students will have one opportunity to retake any graded assignment in which they scored less than 65%. Course grading follows the standard A-FX scale: A (100–94%), B (93–87%), C (86–80%), D (79–73%), E (72–65%).
1. Active participation and homework assignments: 10% of the total grade
2. Oral exam: 45% of the total grade
3. Written exam: 45% of the total grade
To successfully complete the course, students must earn at least 65% on each of these individual assignments.

Learning objectives:
Upon successful completion of this course, the student will be able to:
1. understand important information and be able to communicate fluently in academic situations
2. use basic language skills and strategies in English (listening comprehension, speaking, writing, reading comprehension) at the C1 level
3. recognize and understand elements of academic writing in English
4. summarize and identify the main idea of academic texts in English

Brief outline of the course:
The course will cover various topics, to be determined depending on the students' assessed needs and academic focus. They will be largely derived from the topics covered in the selected textbook, but will also be supplemented by up-to-date materials and texts.

Level: I.

Prerequisites:

Course completion conditions:
attendance at lectures

Learning objectives:
The student:
1. understands the importance of intellectual property in business activities.
2. understands the basic framework of intellectual property law in the Slovak Republic, the EU, and at the regional/international level, including the costs associated with its protection.
3. is able to identify the creation of intellectual property within a company and establish basic processes for its protection.
4. is capable of selecting an optimal intellectual property protection strategy with regard to the type of product/service.
5. is able to apply the basic principles of intellectual property commercialization.
6. is able to identify and prevent infringements of the intellectual property rights of other entities.

Brief outline of the course:
The aim of the course is to provide students with theoretical and practical knowledge of intellectual property and the importance of its protection in business practice. The course focuses on the creation of intellectual property within a company, strategies for its protection, and possibilities for its effective use and commercialization. It also addresses the significance and benefits arising from intellectual property protection for current and future entrepreneurs, as well as examples of good practice.
Experts in the field of intellectual property and industrial property protection will introduce students to the possibilities of protecting brands, ideas, innovations, designs, patents, and copyrighted works, including computer programs and software. Students will gain knowledge about when and how intellectual property should be protected in Slovakia and abroad, how it can be commercialized, and how intellectual property rights can be exercised, enforced, and respected in business activities. The course will also include practical examples and analyses of disputes concerning patents, trademarks, designs, and software based on cases from the practice of the Industrial Property Office of the Slovak Republic. Experts from the Industrial Property Office of the Slovak Republic will participate in the lectures.

Course completion conditions:
During the semester, the student creates and submits written assignment addressing the basics of Slavic studies and selected topics from general linguistics. After completing the semester, the student takes a written test. The maximum number of points consisting of continuous and final assessment is 100. The student has the right to one resit. Credits are assigned to the student who acquires a minimum of 65 points out of a possible 100 for completing the given requirements. The grading scale: A (100–94%), B (93–87%), C (86–80%), D (79–73%), E (72–65%).
a) continuous assessment:
Completing written assignment: 0 – 50 points
b) final assessment:
Written exam (test): 0–50 p.

Learning objectives:
The student is acquainted with the basic linguistic terminology and concepts (in Slovak and Russia) including their characteristics and application. They are able to work with specialised linguistic literature, look for new sources of knowledge, and evaluate them critically. The student is familiar with the major linguistics movements and currents including their characteristics. The student is familiar with the language system levels and units including their attributes and functions. They understand the systemic relationships in a language and its functions. The student perceives the dynamic development of a language. They know the major changes and periods in the development of the (standard) Russian language. They can characterise the Russian language in comparison to Slovak and other Slavic languages. The student navigates the current trends in research and theory of linguistics and Slavic studies. The student knows the principles of the language culture and follows them in written and oral communication. They can apply their knowledge in practice in learning the Slovak and Russian languages in a variety of communication situations. They can apply the knowledge acquired in further studies of linguistic disciplines and developing expertise.

Learning objectives:
The student gains theoretical knowledge and practical skills in the field of translation studies. They have theoretical and methodological knowledge in the areas of translation and interpreting theory and methods, machine translation, and the history of translation and interpreting. They can perform translation analysis and edit a text in practice. The student can apply their knowledge and skills to process samples of different text types. They can apply their knowledge of interpreting theory and methodology in practice during interpreting.

Brief outline of the course:
The student knows the basic concepts in translation (studies) and how thinking about translation as a process/product developed over time. They develop linguistic competences and learn how to identify the attributes and functions of different text types, and train to correctly use sources in the process. They train fluent and correct oral expression and cultivate their language. By training translation, editing, and computer-processing of different text types, the student improves their own linguistic abilities.
Students learn the difference between translation and interpreting as separate types of mediated communication process, brief history of interpreting as a separate scholarly discipline, major European interpreting schools, basics of the interpreting communication theory, interpreting typology, strategies, competences and their development, and the current state of interpreting in Slovakia (what awaits us in practice). Attention is also paid to developing cognitive and communication skills, memory training, concentration, attention splitting, training selected interpreting strategies, and note-taking.

Test: 0–25 p.

b) final assessment:
Oral and final written exams: 0–60 p. (written part: 0–30 p.; oral part: 0–30 p.)

Learning objectives:
The student has systematic knowledge of Russian vs. Slovak lexicology and phraseology. The subject matter is diachronously presented in a broader social, cultural, and pragmatic context. The student can compare the Slovak vs. Russian approaches to lexicology and phraseology. They understand the diachronous and synchronous relationships between the Russian and Slovak languages in lexicology and phraseology. They understand the relation of lexicology and phraseology to the cultural and social development. They use this knowledge to further develop their linguistic, scholarly, and cultural literacy as the core of their future profession. These knowledge and skills are necessary in learning/teaching the Russian as a foreign language. The student learns new phrases and improves their active and passive Russian vocabulary. They can identify the paradigmatic relationships with the lexical system, lexical-semantic categories, and the syntagmatic relationships among lexical units. They can identify lexical, morphological,phonetic, and even interlingual homonymy. They can use conceptual, expressive, and stylistic synonyms. They can distinguish gradual, complementary, and vector antonyms. They can distinguish antonyms and conversions. They can create synonymic chains and antonymic pairs. They can identify Russian vocabulary and phraseologisms in terms of origin, expressiveness, emotionality as well as their territorial and social use.

Brief outline of the course:
The lexical-semantic structure of the Russian language system.

Lexicology as a scholarly field and an academic subject.
Words – definitions and functions.
Lexeme, phraseme, lexeme/phraseme variants.

Learning objectives:
The course focuses on the development of key transferable skills, including soft skills and power skills, required for graduates' successful transition into professional practice in companies, shared service centres, consulting firms, financial institutions and the public sector.
In cooperation with the American Chamber of Commerce in the Slovak Republic, AmCham Slovakia, and participating business entities, the course reflects current employer expectations regarding graduates of economics-oriented study programmes. Particular emphasis is placed on business communication, teamwork, problem-solving, working with information, and decision-making under uncertainty.
Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:
• communicate effectively in a professional and multicultural working environment, including communication in English;
• work in teams and contribute to solving practical business-related problems, such as process improvements, customer situations and project-based tasks;
• argue, present proposed solutions and defend their opinions based on data and facts;
• handle feedback, conflict situations and performance pressure in the workplace;
• apply basic principles of critical thinking, decision-making and time management in economic and managerial practice;
• operate effectively in the environment of shared service centres, business service centres and the corporate culture of international companies.

The course was developed in cooperation with the American Chamber of Commerce in the Slovak Republic, AmCham Slovakia, and the Banská Bystrica Self-Governing Region. The Slovak version of the course will be delivered by professional soft-skills lecturers, such as Learning and Development Managers, Education Specialists and Certified Coaches, from companies associated within the Business Service Center Forum, BSCF, of AmCham Slovakia, including Accenture, IBM, GAMO, GlobalLogic, KPMG and potentially other companies.

Prerequisites:

Course completion conditions:
Completion of all compulsory, elective, and voluntary courses in the study programme as required to achieve min. 170 credits.

b) final assessment:
The state examination involves a colloquial defence of the Bachelor thesis (BT). The State Examination Commission provides a complex evaluation of the BT quality based on the reviews and student's thesis defence. The Bachelor thesis defence takes the form of a colloquium addressing the broader context of the subject matter addressed in BT. The student is required to prove their knowledge of the subject matter acquired during the study and communication skills in the Russian language. The student's performance during the state examination is graded on the scale A-E by the state exam commission.

Learning objectives:
By passing the state exam and defending their Bachelor thesis, the student:
1) proves
they know the subject matter of their own Bachelor thesis on the appropriate level 2 understands the basic context of the subject matter and can formulate preliminary conclusions of their research and/or practical recommendations.
3 uses relevant specialised sources and identifies the ideas important in the context of the thesis the theoretical knowledge to address the subject matter in practice their basic knowledge from translation studies, linguistics, cultural, and literary studies to explain the subject matter follows the bibliographic and citation standards 4 can analyse the subject matter of their BP in a logical manner • koncipovať vhodné postupy,
use the theoretical knowledge of the subject matter in a logical and critical way, in contexts, in specialised communication in Russian, argumentation, and justification of their opinion on the subject matter.
5 creates a consistent specialised text, which works with the relevant specialised sources in a creative way, presents the author's original ideas and proposed solutions.

Brief outline of the course:
Specialised knowledge of the subject matter addressed in the Bachelor thesis in its broader translation studies, linguistic, cultural, and literary context. Transformation of the selected theoretical knowledge of translation studies and Russian language and culture. Integration of the knowledge of individual disciplines studied within the Bachelor study. Specialised communication and argumentation in Slovak and Russian. Working with literature, bibliographic and citation standards.

Course Description

University: Matej Bel University in Banská Bystrica

Faculty: Faculty of Arts

Code: 1d-rus-210 | Course name: Stylistics

Type, extent and method of instruction:
Form of instruction: Lecture / Seminar
Course type: A (A - Compulsory courses, B - Compulsory elective courses, C - Elective courses)
Recommended number of periods: 13 / 26
Method of study: combined

Number of credits: 5

Recommended semester/trimester: 5.

Level: I.

Prerequisites:

Course completion conditions:
During the semester, the student completes and submits homework, a seminar paper, and takes a written test. After completing the semester, the student takes the final oral and written exams. The maximum number of points consisting of continuous and final assessment is 100. The student has the right to one resit. Credits are assigned to the student who acquires a minimum of 65 points out of a possible 100 for completing the given requirements. The grading scale: A (100–94%), B (93–87%), C (86–80%), D (79–73%), E (72–65%).

a) continuous assessment:
Completing homework: 0–15 p.
Seminar paper preparation: 0–15 p.
Test: 0–25 p.

b) final assessment:
Oral and written final exams: 0–50 p. (written part: 0–25 p.; oral part: 0–25 p.)

Learning objectives:
The student has systematic knowledge of Russian vs. Slovak stylistics.This is core knowledge and a necessity in any foreign language study. The student understands the stylistic layers of the language in the cultural, social, and national contexts. They understand the social position and function of the Russian language in the broader social, cultural, and pragmatic contexts and how these compare to the Slovak realities. They can apply the knowledge in this area (Russian vs. Slovak) to analyse and create texts. They develop communication-pragmatic competences and skills related to public speaking in Russian and cultivate their interpretation skills useful in a variety of communication situations. They understand how this discipline generalises the linguistic knowledge. They have systemic and communication knowledge of the language culture and its use.
The student can identify the stylistic aspects of a text and justify their opinion by providing phonetic, grammatical, and lexical examples. They critically perceive texts written in different functional styles. They know the basic terminology pertaining to scientific, administrative, journalistic, confessional, literary, and vernacular styles in Russian. They can compare different texts and analyse linguistic as well as stylistic errors resulting from the Slovak-Russian interference in bilingual speakers. Their linguistic background allows them to become a professional language user able to pick the correct style for every communication situation. They can identify and correct stylistic errors.

Brief outline of the course:
Stylistics as a scholarly field and an academic subject. Contrastive stylistics – Russian vs. Slovak.
Stylistic problems and language culture – the Slovak-Russian interference.
Russian euphony as a stylistic phenomena
Functional styles in Russian.
Language means typical for different functional styles – phonetics, morphology, syntax, lexicology, semantics:
- scientific style
- administrative style
- journalistic style
- confessional style
- literary style
- vernacular style.

Functional and stylistic text analysis.
Stylistic errors and their correction.

Learning objectives:
The student has systematic knowledge of Russian vs. Slovak syntax. They can identify the Russian vs. Slovak syntactic relationships, which is a core skill and a necessity in any foreign language study. They apply their specialised knowledge of syntax to develop language literacy, communication and pragmatic competences, skills related to spoken and written expression, and speech cultivation. They can identify simple and complex sentences and characterise their grammatical attributes and relationships. They use the syntactic tools correctly. They can distinguish single and double constituent sentences, They can create different syntactic structures and work with them. They can identify the function of syntactic tools. As a future professional linguist, they can apply the contrastive Russian-Slovak syntactic knowledge in practice.

Brief outline of the course:
Syntax as a scholarly field and an academic subject.
Syntax within the system of linguistic disciplines.
Basic syntactic units: sentence and syntagm. The relationship of the syntagm and sentence.
Syntagm types (coordinative, determinative, predicative)
Sentence classification (simple, complex, complete, incomplete).
Single and double constituent sentences – structure.
Simple sentence structure. Simple sentence structural schemes.

Main grammatical constituents, double constituent sentences – structures and types, copulas, modifiers.
Notional word classes as secondary grammatical constituents.
semi-predicative constructions (infinitive, participle, transgressive) in Russian vs. Slovak Coordinating, subordinating. Subordination relationship types.
Coordinate and subordinate complex sentences.
Complex sentence types in Russian vs. Slovak. Syntactic modality expression tools.
